Dear Celia,

Sweetie, at last this year is over and we can go home. I know you want to!

Have we raised it this year or have we raised it?

Years are not true chroniclers for four is too small a count to betoken this part of our lives, this molding of our lives, this making of our lives something of worth. Words, like numbers, are too restrictive—learn, work, laugh, play, study, compete, help—we have done these; affection, discouragement, wonder, pride, admiration, bewilderment, happiness—we have felt these. And yet specific enumeration is not justly descriptive of the wondrous composite. Each class, each game, each study hour, each moment of activity has been filled and fringed with various feeling, thoughts, and pressures, which were unique and indescribable by virtue of being part of the whole. It is only in knowing that these times will become a progressively further removed past that we can fully love them. In leaving, a part of ourselves remains, but we take with us a now inseparable remembrance.

JULIE FRANCES ADAMS

Claxton, Georgia

Elementary Education

Julie embodies a refreshing gayness even on a dreary day, as she laughs with you over plans for a week-end and reminisces with you over those past. She thrills at the purchase of a new green sweater, or her eyes sparkle with delight as she shows off another creation to add to her hat collection. A tiny devilish smile tugs at the corners of her mouth while she thinks of a new splendid prank to play on some unsuspecting soul. Her hasty hands knit socks or a sweater that is destined for far away lands. The love and joy for everything human surrounds Julie, and all these qualities—the gayness, the laughter, the mischievousness, and the true friend—comprise one we all know and love.

EVERETT AMOS

Arlington, Virginia

Music Education

"Not only a coed in our class, but in our dining hall too." We couldn't believe it, but it was true. And before many days passed, we realized how nice it was to have a gentleman pull out our chair for us . . . how nice to hear a gruff chuckle as Everett laughed at a joke. And Everett wasn't shy. Before we realized what was happening, Everett was playing ping-pong with us, entertaining us at Wednesday night dinner with his music, telling us witty stories, and taking part in the senior stunt. Everett was always busy . . . bowling, playing basketball at the Y, directing a church choir, and practicing the organ. We'll remember Everett as one who enjoyed life and helped us enjoy it too.

ROSEMARY EVANS ANDERSON
Elementary Education

Macon, Georgia

A flash of black hair, a pretty face, a bright and friendly smile—these will be remembrances of Rosemary.

She was the envy of all when she had her Cinderella wedding in June 1958. A prettier bride one will never see.

Being a person of strong convictions, Rosemary would often delight in friendly discussions with her friends.

One could not help but be impressed by her deep love and respect for her father, whom she tried to emulate.

Certainly everyone will remember her versatile personality and individualistic ways and will, with fondness, think often of "Ro."

MARTHA LEE BELL

Newman, Georgia

History and Government

After this statuesque brunette with the noiseless laugh had been at Wesleyan one month, the Green Knights recognized her capability and came under the influence of her quiet but forceful leadership. "Mot" is a powerhouse of paradoxes. She has been "Mama" to Persons Dorm as a freshman and a senior, but when stunt time comes around she's always "Papa." No one is as slow and deliberate, yet who else can talk "ninety-'leven" miles a minute? Martha vows she "never knows a thing," but always comes through with an enviable grade. "And like a star—a self-sufficient star—she makes us raise our utmost being to a higher sky." These words describe Martha's thorough and almost unbelievable goodness—a goodness that causes her to be an example towards which we all strive.

ELEANOR BEST

McRae, Georgia

Elementary Education

Eleanor and her rare capacity for creating happiness will be remembered as long as instant coffee is made, music is played, popcorn is munched in theaters, Southerners speak with a drawl, and college girls go on diets. Only Eleanor could bubble vivaciously at 2 a.m., in the midst of late gab fests or an exam study-break. We shall remember the contagious smile and the sheer devilment in her eyes, which make the most everyday expressions seem unique. How often have we been grateful to her for her insight and understanding or for the frankness that she tempers so well with tact.

BARBARA MAJORS BIRD

Moultrie, Georgia

English

Barbara is the energetic redhead who can accomplish a week's work in two hours. But English themes or French homework never stand in the way when there is the possibility of a bridge game or going to get an ice cream cone. You may wonder how she manages to get so much done; those who know her will tell you that it is not only ambition; it is a strong desire to be asleep before ten o'clock. Her dreams include lots of travel, a French Provincial house, and a wardrobe of green dresses.

MARY JUDITH BLASINGAME

Moultrie, Georgia

Elementary Education

Enthusiasm, new ideas for parties, lesson plans, or a sudden adventure are all a part of the Judy we see dashing down the hall during the week, and then—rush, rush, rush—a blue streak, and Judy is off for another week-end. Boys from Davidson, Georgia, and other southern schools vie for Judy's attentions. They are entranced by her timely remarks, unexpected whoops, and playful antics. They know, as we at Wesleyan, that her attractiveness goes beyond the outward appearance. Behind the charming manner and friendly smile there is a strength of character which few attain. Her conscientiousness, sincerity, and dependability are some of the qualities which make us grateful for Judy's friendship.

MARY HOLSBERRY BOOTLE

Macon, Georgia

English

A quiet Victorian dignity . . . instantaneous wit and New Orleans charm. Yesterday we had never heard of Mary Bootle, or her Gus. Today our eyes follow the handsome, tailored figure across campus to her red sports car and we marvel over her intense interest in the intellectual which softens instantly to easy chatter over steaming coffee. We know now that she takes all her interests home to share them with Gus as excitingly as she has shared them here. Yesterday we watched those dark eyes and gesticulating hands complete a response in class and were anxious to penetrate that "coffee-cream" face to learn more of this genuine new friend. We will remember Mary and be glad for what she has given.

LINDA GILLMORE CABERO

Hawkinsville, Georgia

Church Music

Linda not only strives to be the devoted housewife, she also maintains the role of the dedicated college student and talented musician. We remember Linda staggering down the hall under a ton of music and hymn books muttering dazedly, "I gotta go practice," keeping us in stitches when we're feeling low. Superior scholastic standards, a deep sense of understanding, and a modest way of accepting her talents are among the qualities which we associate with her. Linda possesses a harmonious blend of ideals, practicalities, graciousness, and dignity.

HELEN ELIZABETH CANNON

Cornelia, Georgia

Music Education

Quiet, sincere, shy, yet hilarious . . . bringing the room down after a performance of "Ragga-Ma-Hoolie" . . . these are thoughts of Helen, the girl who is so spirited in putting up Homecoming decorations, the one who has a car full on Wednesday night for dinner at the Pig, or has a small group later at night for ice cream just before the Sunshine closes.

Quiet walks through the woods, viewing sunsets with few spoken words, sharing the intangible things in life . . . these represent that which is Helen. A kaleidoscopic personality, she gives her time, her possessions, her friendship, herself . . . and forgets the gift.

We look admiringly at Ann for her determination in obtaining a college education, yet are forced to smile as she dashes madly to reach her home and husband after Friday classes. Her ability to get everything done somehow, even though waiting until the last minute, amazes us. Since taking up residency as a senior, Ann has given us the opportunity to know and respect her quiet, calm, and sincere manner.

ELIZABETH KAY CARROLL

Mathematics

Behind the wheel of a white Ford streaking down the highway is Kay. Hurrying so that she may share the delicious food from home . . . and then to study . . . keeping the study parlor lights on until the wee hours of the A.M. We remember the tests that she was sure she didn't pass, only to find another A at the top of the paper. We see Kay rushing . . . always in a hurry . . . clothes jerked on in five seconds falling neatly into place. Kay, mathematical wizard; streaking down the soccer field; volleying on the tennis court; mastering the basketball, sewing (beautifully) at class meetings and stunt practice; playing the piano or organ . . . the epitome of versatility. We know also that Kay fills her place in church every Sunday . . . the sincere one who has ideals who stands up for what she believes is right. EMILY MONTFORT CHILDRES

Reynolds, Georgia

Sociology

A curly blonde rushes back from classes, pops into the room, and asks breathlessly, "Has Don called yet?" Then away she goes in a flurry of footsteps, chasing down the hall in her self-appointed task of phone monitor. This is Toots . . . a Lambda Chi's best friend, an efficient student, and a lovable person to know. We knew her for three and one-half years as a determined worker plugging away behind a math book or on the diving board for Naiads. Inevitable afternoon naps . . . loyal president of the aqua knights . . . charter member of the Porter Party Girls . . . are fragments from her dorm days. Her sympathy for others when they have a problem, her knack for mechanics when we have a broken hot plate, her delight in sharing the latest jokes . . . this is Toots, who makes life happier wherever she goes. She has left a trail of joy and admiration among us that will continue to sparkle behind her throughout life.

BU YOUNG CHUNG

Seoul, Korea

Psychology

To know this girl is a privilege, to respect her is inevitable, and to have her as a friend is wonderful. A student with determination, she is conscientious, earnest, and persevering in all her endeavors. She has the charm of an assured, effortless manner. She thinks deeply, has a searching mind, and is intelligent. Above all comes the reason why the student body and the faculty stand staunchly behind her—Bu Young is synonymous with honesty and integrity. This girl has strong, deeply rooted feelings and true purpose.

Seldom seen on campus without a smile, "Bu" possesses a quick and sparkling wit. She has taught us much about her country in church, in class, and in chapel. Bu Young has shown us that we need to have confidence in ourselves.

SYLVIA JEAN CLARK

Cairo, Georgia

Music Education

The startling blare of jazz from a record player with the volume registering five accompanies Sylvia as she beats out complex rhythms on the bongos. The chaotic swirl of musical motion subsides and the mood changes. We hear the haunting strains of "In the Still of the Night," as a five-foot, bermuda-clad figure sings with the Wash Board Band.

Whether coffee drinking, teeth-scrubbing, or "lecturing," Sylvia is a champion, but her real talent is in working with people and making them love music as she does. Her more serious moments puzzle and mystify us, but we realize "Faustine's little girl" has grown up.

As changeable as its color from summer green to vivid fall is Carol's personality. Bright leaves fluttering and dancing in a summer breeze . . . Carol's bubbling personality, enthusiasm, originality . . . spontaneous laughter . . . sparkling brown eyes. Twisting roots, forming intricate patterns in rich earth . . . Carol's versatility, depth of understanding and sincerity . . . dependability . . . a life giving substance. The trunk, standing firm and steady . . . Elementary Education

"Anyone for a study break?" As people come into the room, she entertains us with her "singing." She's always ready to have fun, whether it be at a party, or playing some impish prank in the dorm. We've seen her in many different moods too—excited over a weekend jaunt to Georgia, conscientious as a practice teacher, elated with her many wedding plans. Even though a number of activities occupy her time, she's constantly able to come up with a sure-fire solution to everyone's problems. When we glimpse her shining auburn hair from across campus, we realize how much the Tri-K's will miss her next year. She'll always be remembered by her classmates for her loyalty, sincerity, and thoughtfulness in all she does.

Cosmopolitan in ideas but still a lover of ice cream sodas, a pig-tailed volleyball player yet an efficient homemaker—this unusual combination we find in Ann. Her broadmindedness and insight are reflected in the frank opinions she offers spontaneously and in her excellent scholarship. Ann's unique hairdos and the original jewelry which results from her husband's hobby, add to our picture of Mrs. Croom—the essence of individuality.

PAUL ALEXANDER DAUM

Akron, Ohio

Theatre Production

The speaker steps to the rostrum, smiles, and cheerfully begins his speech. "It is so nice to be here with you charming young ladies today and . . ." Suddenly two masculine hands wave frantically amidst that sea of lovely feminine faces. "Excuse me, ladies and gentlemen." And that's our Paul, witty, talented in stage lighting, and above all, a gentleman. He seldom becomes angry even when the temperamental light board spouts flames. Such occasional occurrences reveal Paul's personality; he quickly sets about rectifying the situation, wasting neither time nor words, just as he tackles similar jobs. Paul came to Wesleyan from Akron, Ohio, two years ago bringing a storehouse of fresh theatrical ideas and jokes, and a green English Ford packed with Ivy League clothes. Paul is our mentor in the theatre, but he is at the same time our favorite gentleman on campus.

As intricate as the design of a complex tapestry . . . Evelyn . . . each thread a facet of her personality. A serious student eagerly pursuing some new path of English . . . the dignity, maturity, and self-assurance of a teacher-to-be . . . a striving for perfection . . . a sensitivity to beauty . . . With contagious laughter and eyes sparkling, Evelyn is enthusiastic in her endeavors, whether they be leading cheers at a soccer game or spending hours decorating Christmas cards and packages. Evelyn is the well-groomed figure leaving for Atlanta and the form with the jingle-bell bedroom shoes sitting cross-legged on the floor.

Threads blend into a vivid pattern . . . Evelyn . . . sincere . . . understanding . . . conscientious . . . reliable . . . giving of herself. The tapestry is not complete for life is the weaver. Yet, as it grows it will become more beautiful as Evelyn attains the high goals for which she strives.

JACQUELYN LOU DAVIS

Macon, Georgia

History and Government

What is a Jackie? Well, a Jackie is many things, a student, hidden in her own personal corner of the library completing another history paper; a teacher encamped in the study parlor until 2:00 A.M. correcting papers and making lesson plans; a leader, directing the affairs of the famous Knight Hall House Council or being chairman of the number one stunt; a follower, seeking and heeding the advice of friends and professors; a friend, giving the best of herself and demanding the best from those about her; an entertainer, giving a short dramatization of the days at Silver Bay or Estes Park; a joiner, taking part in every water battle and painting spree the Green Knights ever had. Jackie discloses an inexhaustible excitement over taking a trip, and above all, an underlying interest in people and events.

NANCY KATHRYN DIXON

Sylvania, Georgia

English

A rare but delightful blend of interests and moods is found in Nancy, our petite Lady Hamilton with innocent smile on her lips but a mischievous twinkle in her eyes. "Being domestic" as she crochets exquisite lace; revealing insight, understanding, and efficiency as she directs plans for Stunt; musing in the tradition of her Southern heritage and intensified by her joyous participation in life creates a poem or story. Through imaginatively projecting her own consciousness into that of others, Nancy shares her friends' joys or problems, successes or failures with spontaneous delight and excitement or with sincere understanding and encouragement that radiates from her calm inner strength and deep Christian faith.

"To be "Joyful" is to be on the go. From the crack of dawn till time to sign in, it is possible to see this small, vivacious, enameled-eyed girl hidden behind an armful of books sneaking in and out of the library and bucking to class and the catacombs. And then when there's suddenly a free minute, Joy madly dashes to Atlanta for one of "those" weekends. As Joy continues to travel in her vicious circle, we'll never forget those conversations she had with the genie in the radiator, the full significance of the Gynko tree which she gave us, or her extracurricular activities such as collecting furniture, unique salad recipes, and bride's magazines. But again, to remember Joy, one cannot help but think of her conscientious efforts and her continuing friendship with us.

BETTE SHARLENE HALL

Thomson, Georgia

Social Science

Eyes mistily gaze across the golf course and Sharlene is lost in the fantasy of her thoughts. Suddenly the eyes twinkle and Sharlene is bubbling about her "students" or an anticipated trip to Atlanta. Yesterday we saw Sharlene cheering wildly for the Green Knights at a soccer game, hidden behind a pile of library books, coming up only for a cup of coffee, slaving to meet a term paper deadline, or just relaxing to her favorite recordings. Today we see a more serious Sharlene. One who has mature understanding and deep insights into human nature. Enthusiastically she shares our joys and sympathetically listens to our problems. Conscientiously Sharlene works toward her goals, and with her faith and strength of character she shall surely reach them.

ANNE HICKS HARP

Reynolds, Georgia

Art Education

She began at Wesleyan, a brave little art major . . . she had never had art, but she liked it. She's been loyal, quietly getting her job done, and beginning the next with a natural resolution. In her contacts with people Anne does not seek recognition; she enters a situation most unnoticeably and harmonizes most emphatically . . . no account of life fails to strike a responsive chord within her. Her laughter has an air of reserve, but also a capacity for the ridiculous. . . . "I think I'm going to get hysterical." A complete failure at getting mad, her attempts to comply in this manner serve rather to amuse because she is uncomplaining and patient. Trademarks are hers: a leather shoulder bag, a Chevrolet bug, a slender frame that can tie up into a knot and disappear . . . a smile . . . music.

ANNE HOLDERFIELD

LaGrange, Georgia

Religion and English

Once Anne is discovered she is never forgotten, and the discovery is completely fascinating. We see Anne with her inimitable liveliness and mature calm gliding from group to group with a natural quality of adaptability. Her conscientious pursuit of study, enriched by her love for a serious exchange of ideas further intensifies her selfless concern for others. With the same consistency that characterizes her friendships, Anne devoted herself to outside responsibility with a thoroughness that embraces dedication. Anne is an amazing combination . . . piano lessons at 21 . . . concerts and opera glasses . . . a ten o'clock cup of tea . . . paperback books . . . laughter . . . charming frustrations . . . weekends . . . clothes . . . boys. Anne has a sturdy optimism reinforced by a dynamic philosophy of life which she thoughtfully alters or broadens in the face of new experiences. Many times unrewarded, she quietly follows the high standards she sets for herself.

CAROL EUGENIA INMAN

Fort Pierce, Florida

English

With a transplanted Mills College, and now a Green Knight spirit, Carol has gladly joined in with us whether it be dying her hands and the banners for Homecoming, or just gabbing over a cup of black coffee and cinnamon buns. An art for procrastinating, but somehow or other getting the work done before we do, Carol makes us a little bit envious of her skills. This "on-the-spur-of-the-moment" girl with a flashing eye for something different like "let's study now and go later," is easily persuaded to change her mind.

Following Carol's study in the library, the triumphant march from AIDA, one of her favorites, describes the manner she enters the room after learning she has made another "A" in English. Her ability to change hair-styles two minutes before her date exemplifies her versatile personality. Carol carries with her a spark of devout interest in her friends and the world around her.

Eustis, Florida

Music Education

Lorna has filled our days with strains of her melodious voice, whether singing with the Wesleyannes and the Glee Club, or just singing along with the radio. She is a devoted musician who unselfishly shares her talent with us. Though Lorna is quite talented, she remains modest and unpretentious about her accomplishments. The true and pure tone of her song somehow makes her seem angelic, but we who know Lorna realize that she is also capable of impish merriment. Serious, sincere, and somehow serene, she has given us composure and inspiration.

HAZEL CONSTANCE JENNE

In the future when we think of Hazel, we will remember her numerous weekends in Atlanta . . . "Take from Tech" . . . the bi-weekly long distance phone calls . . . the "not-less-than-game" bridge sharp . . . the popcorn and coke addict . . . her intellectual side complete with black-rimmed glasses . . . the serious discussions . . . and her enjoyment of classic novels.

Hazel, neat, punctual, and businesslike yet never staid, meets the goals she sets for herself with the determined optimism. Upon occasion she assumes convincing sophisticated airs, but will always be remembered by her friends as the fun-loving girl . . . Hazel "Jenny."

DEE BRAY JOINER

Wrightsville, Georgia

Sociology

Who was the first person most of us met in the fall of 1956 as we entered Wesleyan? With few exceptions, it was Dee. Dee with her eager smile, endless enthusiasm, and perpetual interest in everybody. The epitome of unselfishness who was always ready to share everything from food to her best formal or her deepest joys and problems. A Green Knight to the core, Dee, first one out on color day or to a pep rally; the girl who always had time to do more than her part in any class activity. Dee the athlete, charging down the soccer field, the humorist stirring laughter in a room, the friend giving love and consolation. We have seen too little of her this year for a new role as "Dee the wife" has led her to new responsibilities. But she will always be in our thoughts as we know we are in hers.

LYDIA ANDERSON JORDAN

Pulaski, Virginia

Speech Education and English

With a bob of her pony tail, Lydia comes in . . . eyes bright even after staying in the study parlor 'til the wee hours of the morning. She may be excited over her part in the play, a visit of her recent boy friend, or the trip she's about to take. Never is there a problem about what to buy her, for if it is pink it's sure to please. Her long hours spent in the Fine Arts building are rewarded by her performance in a play or in the "Miss Macon Contest." Whether she's "Miss Jordan" in the classroom, or Lydia on the campus, she's still the little Virginia belle we all love.

NEVA LOUISE KING

Chemistry

"Come talk to me while I wash my hair," is a frequent plea made to anyone who is willing to listen to a lengthy discussion of the forthcoming events in Neva's life. The moment you hear a pathetic, begging voice, you know that she is about to ask a favor of you to which you can never say no.

Only she is capable of taking fifteen minutes to answer a simple question, carrying on a conversation with herself, using a bottle of Listerine in a matter of seconds, and seeming to exist in a world of her own.

We will hold in our memory the comfort and encouragement received from a warm and earnest conversation with her at any time we needed a friend in which to confide. The sincerity of her friendship is not only shown by words, but through her deeply thoughtful and generous actions.

Only Tatjana could possess such a marvelous knack for making everyone feel as if they are the most important person in the world when they are with her.

Constantly kidding us about our "love-life," we get a kick out of her insatiable curiosity and humor. Truly a conversationalist, Tatjana has a sincerity, purity and interest in all things to be envied by all of us. The door swings open and "Ecky" flies into the room with eyes aglow. "Y'all, I had the best time." A vivid description of the latest escapade follows amid screams and giggles. Eleanor surprises us in history class with her knowledge of historical events and insight into world affairs. A freshman approaches "Ecky" with a problem which she miraculously solves. When "Ecky" is asked the name of her hometown, she replies with a blush and flutter of eyelids, "At-ta-pul-gus." "Ecky" is most spontaneous during her coffee break, when she has her daily "heart attack." With big hair curlers, dainty blue shorties, knees propped up to her chin, and a cup of coffee nearby she's completely captivating. "Ecky's" personality has many facets which blend into an unforgettable whole.

For three years we saw Ann on campus and knew her by her dainty white blouse, her warm smile, and her laughing eyes. We loved her then and spotted her depth, but this year she came to live with us and we penetrated that depth. Now we know what loving her really means. Now we know the silent, selfless Ann, observant of our every need. We see her with infinite energy as she zips across campus with her sprightly run, but we see her also giving patiently of her time whenever she can help. Laughter is said to be contagious, but there is an art involved in the spreading of it. Sue has mastered this art. Where she is, laughter and joy are. Where she is, momentary frustrations take wing, and if they should return they seem to be of small importance.

A love for music, a love for the simple, wonderful things of life (best expressed by "it doesn't take much to amuse me!"), a love for fun and excitement—these are Sue's. She will never be lonely, for life is good to those who truly enjoy it.

Doris is a Green Knight through and through, whether bellowing, "What time is it?" with her well-projected voice or directing the GK band during the half-time show attired in her "green legs." We often wonder if her heart may not be green too. How about a quick trip to the Pig or an afternoon at the movies? We're willing to bet she'll be signed out and in the car before anyone else has really made up her mind whether to go or not. A talented "Big Ben" in stunt, an able soccer manager, a red-hot fire chief . . . Doris is all of these. Individualistic in her choice of clothes, unpredictable, impulsive . . . but there is a tremendous depth of character revealed in her keen insight into the problems of others, her loyal friendships, and her devotion to her ideals and beliefs. As Green Knights, none of us can look back and not remember how this petite feminine, dark-haired girl performed the night we won stunt for the first time. Lost in the glow of her sheer rhythmic animation, the audience was captivated by her charm. But the real key to her personality is her sincere concern for life's deeper qualities. Mary brings to mind impulsive shopping trips, a new jingling bracelet, another bottle of French perfume, a cocktail dress that only she could wear, and frequent jaunts to Riverside with a carload of friends. Mary has won our admiration, love, and respect through her kindness, patience, sensitivity, and concern for all. It is she who can always find a place in her room and her heart for the woes of a friend or for a lost and hungry puppy.

Many of us see her best through her gift of writing. Her positive knack for having the right phrase at the right time has been proved numerous times in academic work. Once a naive little girl with fluffy blond curls bubbled into our lives and planted herself there permanently. Our incredulous eyes have watched that unmistakable bounce as she has set off on another impish prank or a secret errand for a friend. Beneath the surface of her million tidbits of useful information and the exaggerated tales, crouch a warm generosity and sincerity, ready to overflow at the slightest provocation. We have watched the expressive blue eyes shining with excitement or struggling to hide keen disappointment. And suddenly the little girl we've seen in bows and sashes and red tights had become a poised, determined biologist bursting to share new breadth of knowledge and insight. Loyalty and leadership have blended with the insatiable curiosity and child-like exuberance into vibrant maturity. And we are still captivated by the bubbling little girl and dependable adult who commands our admiration.

There is Peggy the little girl with an infectious smile of quiet pleasure over a cup of coffee and a bit of newly acquired knowledge shared with friends. There is the puckish giggle that spills excitedly in her delight at doing the unexpected, just "lolly-popping around." Humble about her own accomplishments, she has a childlike faith in the goodness of others. Then there is Peggy the maturing young woman, confident in her opinions. Aware of the importance of understanding national and world affairs, she believes in the worth of the United Nations. Seeing Peggy leave books unopened and papers unwritten in order to get away for a while in the Chevy, one might think her completely carefree. But Peggy is deeply sensitive to the needs of others and is sympathetic and understanding of their problems. Her greatest pleasure and happiness is in the giving of herself to others. Quality Points? What Quality Points?

EMILY RICHARDSON

Jacksonville, Florida

Psychology

E is for eager, elfish, entertaining, enlivening. We expect enjoyment with an exclamation point when "E" is around. Crew-neck sweaters, button-down collars, suave church outfits, or the latest in sports wear—"E" is always dressed in accordance with the most recent I.L. dictates. Her energy extends from the dorm to the soccer field, where she, in her green sweater, guards the G.K. goal.

E is also for Emily—sincere in expressing sound opinions and keen insights, quick to learn, a bit of a stoic, but not indifferent. Her objective approach lends validity to her evaluations, and her earnest application of ability in work and play makes her worthy of our respect.

Of course the jaunty little VW in the parking lot belongs to "E." Many a Wesleyanne has appreciated Emily's generous sharing of her surprisingly capacious little car. But perhaps the best part of riding with her is being exposed to the unique and continuous flow of "Emilyesque" humor. Remembrance of Emily will call up a smile and a wish for more personalities like hers.

Little Girl, I Am Not a Sophomore

HASSELLTINE NEAL ROBERTS

Macon, Georgia

History and Government

Toes turned outward, contact lenses focused straight ahead, a tailored blazer hastily put on over an equally tailored skirt—clear the way—Tena's either late for work in the library or off on "T&C" business (confidential, of course). Nothing can stop Tena from doing an excellent job of anything, once she has her mind and heart set on it—whether it's corresponding for the Georgia Athletic Federation or getting the books out for soccer practice. How she can make trips to the Pig and the post office and still get to bed before 12 remains a mystery. "A BLT and a Pepsi, but go easy on the ice cream and cake," is her motto! "T" is an enthusiastic participant in any devilment and a willing travel companion no matter what the destination. "Miss Hasseltine" has the combination of personality traits that constitute a capable school teacher or an efficient librarian.

Sparkling blue eyes, a soft fluff of blonde hair, clicking high heels, jingling bracelets, the heavy aroma of perfume—Mrs. Rogers anticipates another gay shopping spree. The next morning attractively dressed, Alicia hustles to her car for a day of student teaching or a week-end visit with Harold. A perfectionist in the art of housekeeping, she will have little trouble switching from the role of student to homemaker.

Our Own D.O. Complete With Smoked Mirrors

KATHERINE REBECCA ROGERS
English

Macon, Georgia

A burst of wild laughter, a flash of black and white, and with a loud "52 Pickup" the harlequin leaped from the stage. Contrasts in her personality as vivid as her checkered costume, we see Kathy presiding with calm dignity in a College Government meeting, then, all arms and legs, flying after the soccer ball. We hear her speak and are amazed not only by her mastery of the language but also by the deep insight and maturity she expresses. Warm hazel eyes brim full with a desire to convey her thoughts as she touches the tip of her tongue to her lips in an effort to choose the precise word from her "Websterian vocabulary." Then seconds later we hear "jungle calls" followed by a burst of giggles.

Creativity, understanding, quest for truth, sincerity, and faith . . . encompassing these and innumerable other facets is that intangible quality which is Kathy and which sets her apart.

SHEILA LETO SCOTT

Two dark eyes—sparkling with mischief one minute and smiling seriously the next . . . this is Sheila. A music major, her talent is always in demand. If the class ever needs a song written, she is the one called on. Stunt committee, class officer, soccer team . . . her spirit is always there, inspiring us to greater things. She's the envy of us all—finishing school in three years, keeping a husband happy, and still making top grades! She really puts her heart into her work, whether it's teaching "When Johnny Comes Marching Home" to a room full of second graders or writing a letter to the newspaper demanding more food in the dining room. A deep religious faith gives her an understanding which is often sought by classmates. We'll miss her next year, but we won't forget her—a true Tri-K, she'll always be a part of the class of 1961.

A graceful manner and a charming smile . . . Sue, our little lady. Sitting in a corner with legs crossed and a naive smile, Sue is a picture of innocence. One would never suspect her as the instigator of a mischievous prank. Then her Sphinx-like eyes and uncontrollable giggles tell us we have been fooled. The phone rings and Sue is summoned to answer one of her numerous calls. Later she sits pettily in the middle of her bed . . . legs crossed once more . . . reading a beloved southern historical novel. We have missed these sights around the dorm during our senior year. Patty . . . swinging across campus at sunset donned in a sweat shirt and tennis shoes, with a skinless cat tucked under one arm and a fetal pig bottled in formaldehyde in the other hand. The library doors open and in she comes, hurrying to her favorite haunt—a cozy space between the seldom-visited stacks where she can study comfortably and undisturbed. Between classes and trips to the library, she can be seen dribbling down the soccer field or racking up another win for the swimming team. Outspoken and quick to offer an opinion or call someone's bluff, dissatisfied with weakness whether it be in herself or others—this is Patty. Symbolic of three years of her college life were nights spent sleeping under mounds of covers, a one-eyed monkey held tightly. At last we find the monkey collecting dust in the corner behind the bed.

ELISABETH DRAYTON SHULL Canton, North Carolina
Elementary Education

Some people fritter away their time today planning to make up for it tomorrow . . . but not Drayton. Drayton lives each day to the fullest. Her extra hours are spent reading, playing the organ, writing to her latest "Charles," planning for her next summer job, or engaging in lengthy conversations until the wee hours of the morning; and then, quite often Drayton flies into the room literally jumping up and down with excitement over the latest pictures she has taken of her fourth grade students or some other bit of good news. Drayton finds most of life interesting and exciting. She is one who expects good things from tomorrow and is rarely disappointed when tomorrow arrives.

Physical Education

"Singletury" is a cup winner, no matter what the competition—soccer, tennis, ping pong, bridge . . . and men!

A puzzled look comes from the coffee-pouring end of the table, and we are aware that Julie has just returned to the world of reality and wants to know exactly what has been said. If a trip to Len Berg's for filets (accent on "fil") and hot fudge cake is being proposed, she's willing to furnish transportation in the faithful blue Ford. But you can expect to wait a few minutes in the car until she combs her hair, brushes her teeth, and puts lotion on her legs.

At Wesleyan we have seen Julie grow into the capable and poised leader and the gracious and mature Juliet that leaves such an indelible impression. Julie possesses the enviable trait of being able to recognize and bring out the best in every person.

Stylish, playful, leisurely writing a story in one afternoon that will receive an inevitable A from Dr. Gin . . . the only one in the speech course whose southern drawl can be understood and ring with a unique musical tone . . . a spot deep within her heart that is ever ready to encompass and soothe all the cares and woes of those she meets. She is gifted with qualities of an artist whether it be writing, singing or just the simple art of conversation. "Going" is synonymous with Emilie as you catch a fleeting glimpse of her running in and out. Then there is the mind full of ideas for that "novel," a mind never ready to rest or be satisfied but longing to explore many places and eager to enact in person these many excursions. Four feet, eleven and three-fourths inches, twinkling brown eyes, distinctive hair style, and a rhythmical bob combine to produce Lou, our vivacious doll. She goes into orbit hearing Pete Rugulo, leading the washboard band, discussing Tech's football potentials, planning a trip home to Vidalia, playing Cupid for her three older brothers, dragging in late from stunt, planning announcements for assembly, rushing to class with a pocketbook twice her size, making plans to teach in Atlanta, simply riding to the "Pig" for that tasty cheeseburger. Lou has made a lasting impression upon Wesleyan.

A vision of three feet high riding boots and a stereo set of mammoth proportions with records for every mood—Richie was moving in. She is a senior transfer, but is considered indispensable! Tiny pigtails all over her head—a sign that she's deep in thought—a short story for Dr. Gin is in the making. The wee hours find her still plugging away at Browning or her French translations—sometimes because a friend needed some encouragement, perhaps because she just couldn't resist an interesting discussion, or even more often because she is addicted to piddling. Those "far away places" become real and vital as we listen eagerly to tales of "that wonderful summer" in Europe. And even more eagerly we listen as she speaks of wedding plans, "a certain little parsonage" and the Reverend, "Mr. Al."

Because Anne possesses a great zest and love for life and the ability to give a creative artistic touch to things, her life will never become tedious or dull.

Ginger . . . her personality is all her name implies. Awakening at 7:00 with a cheery "Good morning, Mr. Rabbit," she is always ready to face the pop tests and projects that her day may bring. Her time is filled with a variety of activities: an afternoon of soccer and a night in the pool are topped off with a talk on her recent trip to Europe. For three years we have known her as a dependable worker and friend whose infectious smile delights us and whose cooperativeness amazes us.

"Pig, anyone?" The Sigma Nu sweetheart attired in an SAE sweat shirt is off again. If and when Leah is on campus, we look first for her in the Pharm, and then in the dorm where she's either sleeping, reading, watching TV, finishing a statistics problem after thirteen hours, or talking on the telephone. Her life is by no means dull . . . we've all heard about the trips to Philadelphia and Atlanta. Leah will be remembered for the alma mater in chapel, finally in a key suitable to everyone, wash board band performances, and her impersonations of one gone but not forgotten. Whether playing the piano for Green Knight stunts, or leading the class in cheers at soccer games, we find Leah quite capable. With one of her eyebrows mischievously raised over her bright eyes, you can be sure Meredith is thinking provocative thoughts of teasing someone, or with a dreamy look those thoughts slip to that special someone up in Iceland. A motherly look instantly appears the minute Claire is mentioned, and Meredith often returns from town with a small, piquant hat or delightful storybook to entertain her young daughter.

You can be sure that she'll lapse into blissful silence whenever "Clair de Lune" or "Someone to Watch Over Me" are played, and she often likes to end her day listening to these favorite songs. Our unpredictable Tim is the girl with the Mona Lisa expression . . . the shining silent eyes which betray her seriousness of thought and gentleness of heart, the hesitant smile inviting any excuse to break into laughter, and the innumerable curls, defying application of hair tonics to keep them in place. But behind the half serious, half comical look hides a personality of many moods. No one but Tim could nickname a cello Theopolus J. von Skyavalsky, and only she could skip audaciously over to a friend's house to do her weekly wash. Eleanor never has time to finish everything, yet she inevitably manages to make dean's list. She's here, she's there, she's everywhere at once, but somehow she's never too busy to chat over a cup of tea in her "neat, well arranged room." And then the hours of laughter begin! PAULA WEATHERLY

Speech Education

Tantalizing is her talent of drawing us out of our shells and away from our worries, amazing is her gift of narrative conversation, inquisitive is her mind. In contrast to the typical talkative old woman type character she has portrayed on the Wesleyan stage, she is in reality praiseworthy in every manner.

We were truly blessed when Paula, the day student, came to live and share her senior year with us in our castle. Then the fun started. There was the night she awoke suite-mates to show off her roommate's charcoal "dentures." There was the time she tried so hard to get mad, and just simply couldn't swing it without grinning from ear to ear. And then there was the night she had such "wild" dreams that she demolished her coffee cup which was minding its own business on the night table.

Our easy-going Peggy, taking things as they come, never letting herself become flustered, has been the calm in our storms. Her friendly smile and willingness to help others make her one of our favorites. Whether it is memorizing Shakespeare or helping with the annual, one can be assured of a job well done. Those trips to Clemson in her faithful old black Chevy and the long week-ends in Ninety Six with "B" brought sparkles to her eyes and pep to her walk. Even though a noticeable "morning silence" prevails when she arises, you know she's up by the hustle and bustle as she rushes to breakfast only to be greeted by closed doors or half a call down. There will always be admiration for her power of concentration when those inevitable tests roll around; and envy when, at 12:00, she retires for the night with her Raggedy Ann doll close by her pillow.

Rachel—a complex personality. At night we see her breezing down the hall clad in red bedroom shoes with her bathrobe trailing behind and hair “a mess.” Forever in a hurry, but taking time out to say “good-night” and smile as only she can do. Don’t take advantage of her welcome mat unless you are willing to be challenged to discussions which will last most of the night. With her, sadness becomes laughter and gaiety takes on seriousness. A part of this seriousness is Rachel’s concern for “Y,” for others, for religion, and for her art. Her concern involves the whole of life. You’ll always find her busy, whether in the art room, writing class songs, working on stunt backdrops, or drawing those unforgettable T&C cartoons. We will remember RAW, her gaiety, her depth, her sensitivity to life around her.

Throughout four years she has been many things—Aunt Pittypat, bustling and chattering . . . Dr. Time, crisply expounding his creation. Karen, dressing for bed in either a feminine nightgown or her father's pajamas, depending on her mood . . . joyously banging away on the piano or singing in Wesleyannes . . . ever in love, possibly with love itself. RUTH LOIS WILCOX

Gainesville, Florida

English and Psychology

Who is behind the solemn-looking countenance pictured here? A serious-minded scholar? Many of us think of Ruth in this way, but paradoxically, some of us know that she can be just as silly and nonsensical in light conversation as she is arduous in study. Similarly she is the possessor of a unique poetic sensitivity to every phase of her environment, yet has the force and determination necessary for teaching young Girl Scouts to swim. Representing the height of naivete in such areas as make-up tricks and slang expressions, she shows keen vision in matters of real consequence.

After carefully examining her values and motives, Ruth applies her time and talents to worthwhile ends: with pen in hand she creates a character for stunt, or a carefully written paper for Dr. Gin; with mind alert she expresses an honest opinion on a controversial matter; and with tousled hair and laughing eyes she baffles a friend with a quickly spoken word of wit.

Petite, demure, and reserved are words that could be used to characterize Gail, that is, if you were only a casual acquaintance. Upon closer observation you would detect a mischievous gleam in her eye that her friends know and sometimes fear.

The little girl habit of "dressing up" still persists for Gail. Quite spontaneously she may burst into a room with some original creation and corresponding characterization for the entertainment of her friends. Who could forget Gail with opera glasses in hand racing to the window to spy on a pair of lovers by the lake? Could be she is receiving vicarious pleasures.

Having many interests in the world about her, she is constantly pursuing new realms in literature and music. Gail is a personality not easily forgotten.

The word "good" was made for Mary Margaret, who refuses to accept anything short of perfection. She captivates her listeners with her literary work, her love for music, and her delicacy in handling people. We are delighted to see the serious, aloof, contemplative countenance electrified by an unexpected twinkle and the spontaneous and contagious laughter. That foot on the soccer field is dangerous, and the little Ford is "Zoodie" as it ships up the driveway and turns north on the highway. There seems to be no limit to her wit and her capabilities. Mary Margaret has given much to individuals and to Wesleyan.

CAROLYN ELIZABETH WRAY

Winston-Salem, North Carolina
Music Education

"Oh, y'all, I've got to tell you something." This statement is characteristic of Carolyn whether she is telling a joke or about her latest trip to Atlanta. We see her vivacious side when she runs in and out of others' rooms offering witty gems of comfort such as "Halitosis is better than no breath at all!" When we run into her, we never know what she'll be carrying . . . Saran Wrap . . . apple butter . . . books, or a huge practice teaching purse.

She is an interested music major who is easily capable of turning an impossible task into a simple one. We will remember her willingness and ability to turn a dull moment into one of gaiety.

From the Young Green Days of Our Freshman Year

SYLVIA CATHERINE WYLLYS

Winter Haven, Florida
Elementary Education

Take diets punctuated by pizza-eating sprees; spur of the moment trips, be they to town or to Mexico for summer school; add a striking beauty with blue eyes and blonde hair and Sylvia begins to emerge. Remember dances at which Sylvia was a vision in pink satin, and Sylvia with her hair in a pony-tail dressed for a hike in the woods. Remember her cha-chaing through the dormitory to Cugat's latest or as a cheerleader at Homecoming.

But, most significantly, remember an appreciation of all things beautiful; in nature, in classical music, or in literature. Remember her studying, not so much because she wanted to make good grades, as that she simply wanted to "know." Remember the consideration and the love she has for everyone that boomeranged and made everyone love her.

FRANCES HILARY YEARGAN

Rome, Georgia

Christian Education

Hilary . . . a delightful but rare blend of fun and frivolity, seriousness and thoughtfulness. One of those special people who make laughter a little gayer, friendships a bit deeper, and life much more meaningful. Enacting before an entranced audience the mischievous antics of Eloise, tumbling on the stage as a joker in the Green Knight sophomore stunt, drawing funny faces on the blackboard to greet professors and fellow students, dashing away in her famed "puddle-jumper" to pick up a friend at the bus station, teasing away one's problems and worries; Hilary displays her light side. Working diligently, volunteering many original ideas as she helps plan a CEW program or a YWCA chapel service, giving unselfishly of her time and interest to her fellow man, not only during the school term but also during the summer months, radiating conscientiousness, warmth, sincerity, integrity in her every endeavor; Hilary's serious nature is revealed. How strongly we have felt her influence.

MARY EVELYN YOUNG

Moultrie, Georgia

Psychology

In getting to know Mary, one is fascinated by her range of knowledge and her capabilities. Mary's quiet manner never seems to change, whether she's contemplating a problem or using her psychology to help others. If she agrees to do a job, Mary is careful to complete the task thoroughly, usually doing more than is asked of her, never seeking personal recognition. She has collected, from her varied experiences, a multiplicity of items ranging from stray animals to summer service folders. In the dining room we wonder where this slim girl puts all of the food that disappears from her plate. Full of wit and a desire to help others, she is constantly striving toward her Christian goals.

The Hallelujah Class That Will Always Last

DOROTHY ANN YOUNGBLOOD

Savannah, Georgia

English

"Come on, let's go to town!" With this statement, a small, elfish creature scurries out the door and into her ever-faithful "Clidamestra." She is an amazing mixture of seriousness and vivaciousness, evidenced by long hours of study followed by Naiads or stunt practice. Late phone calls, a beaten path to and from the post office, and exciting excursions—all these add up to West Point and Russell. We are grateful for this talented junior-year addition to the Green Knight class.

ANDREA HELEN ZUNZER

Atlanta, Georgia

Physical Education

At three o'clock in the morning, sounds of laughter float down the hall; "Zunzer" is at it again, be it with water pail or itching powder. One minute she is running down the soccer field in whites, whistle bouncing, and those dirty tennis shoes held together with adhesive tape; the next she is in heels and hair curled leaving to go to Atlanta. At the cabin she shows her domestic side as she whips up six pizzas, and then lapses into that unforgettable Italian accent. All will remember her willingness to work and her dependability. Working on homecoming decorations, stunt props, and class projects all show her loyalty to the Green Knights. They grey hairs we have given her can never equal the benefits we have received from her.

Junior, a word which pertains to a certain group of people during a specific time. A word with many connotations integrated into forming one final meaning. Individually we have just begun to delve into our majors. At last we can see beyond the end of our rainboots . . . school for us is measured less in terms of merely graduating but more in terms of individual accomplishment.

Still we as Juniors are a group. The Junior year is a time to branch out on your own but it is also a time for the bridge games, the nightly jaunts to Riverside for the non-calorie pizza. It is a time for that get-up 'n go needed for the extra soccer practices and the last rehearsal before Stunt. It is a time in which all come together to pool brains and brawn to make our class the best ever.

It's hard to evaluate the future. We have gained so much. We can temper our appetite for pizza, bridge, and the "group" and find our way individually in our choices of a profession. We feel that every day we are better able to contribute something . . . anything . . . just contribute.

Our sophomore year . . . the Purple Knights returned to Wesleyan in the fall feeling more confident and secure than we felt at the same time last year when we had unloaded our cars at the loggia for the first time as brand new freshmen.

We were secure in the knowledge of the friendships and experiences of our freshman year and we felt the closeness of class spirit and unity as we shined the P.K. armor and prepared for our great role as "Incomparable and Undubitably Ubiquitous Royal Purple Knight Sophomores." Rat Week succeeded not only in uniting the Golden Hearts but also in cementing the bonds of P.K. loyalty.

We were outwardly the traditional sophs who knew all the answers—but inwardly we secretly realized how very little we did know.

The excitement of soccer season filled our class with spirit galore. Our victory train rumbled through and we felt a closeness with our school—a feeling of being needed and loved.

"Hail to White and Purple . . ." was displayed throughout the campus during Homecoming with banners and our favorite seven foot man. Our second banquet has come—and gone.

Not many days later we heard a group of six little P.K.s singing for all they were worth through the halls at 3:30 a.m. "We've got a secret, a Purple Knight secret. Ain't gonna tell nobody—no matter what you say." The anticipation of stunt surrounded us again.

We need never feel the so-called "Sophomore Slump" for our class is united in its fun, its trials, and its ideals. The charm of Wesleyan and its intangible spirit have welded themselves in us so that we shall find it hard to leave when our time comes.

And so our Sophomore year ends, and we apprehend as well as anticipate our being big sisters and upperclassmen. The time left is short to do all we realize we must . . .

On the day of our arrival in the "little world" of Wesleyan most of our Golden Hearts fluttered. Our big sister Tri-K's did everything they could to make us feel a part of Wesleyan, but something still seemed lacking. Even at the cry of "Pep Rally" when we all rushed for the fountain, our hearts stood still for a moment wondering if we really belonged. We knew we still needed a certain something in order to find our niche in this world of Wesleyan. Then it came. Our hearts fluttered wildly at 6 a.m. one morn when the incomparable, indubitably, ubiquitous Royal Purple Knight Sophomores awakened us so gently for RAT WEEK. Then somehow after those three days, our hearts stopped fluttering for a time.

There were little moments and big ones too when our hearts still jumped. Some came at the never ceasing call of "Quiet Hour!" from our beloved monitors. Our first really big moment came at Homecoming time when we put up our decorations and the soccer team made its entrance. These were the first things we had fluttered through as a class. Perhaps our biggest moment came at Stunt. No one could imagine what we were going to use moss for. We certainly know now!

It takes time to become adjusted to being a lowly frosh again, but our many experiences this year at Wesleyan have served to pull us together and we realize now that no matter what our class ranking is, all we ever need is that Golden Heart Spirit. Finally, we are true Golden Hearts and true Wesleyannes. GO GOLDEN HEARTS!!!

The DEPARTMENT OF MUSIC provides training in music education, applied music, church music, and composition. It also serves the college as a whole by offering courses open to Liberal Arts students, by faculty members and by preparing programs which represent the college in various communities throughout the area.

Helen Cannon, Joy Fowler, Donna Doster, Carolyn Wray, Silva Clark, Charlise Mallory, Eleanor Timmons.

SOCIOLOGY is concerned with the study of familial, political and economic institutions and the relationship of these institutions to the never-ending search for solutions to human problems.

The courses of this department are designed to acquaint the student with the development of cultural and economic structures so that she may more effectively participate in democratic living in a family group as a citizen and community leader.

Sharlene Hall, Carol Ann Page

TEACHER EDUCATION at Wesleyan is a responsibility of the entire college. Depending upon whether their interests are in elementary, secondary music, or art education, students will combine work in other departments in varying proportions.

Ann Stuckey, Sylvia Wyllys, Lou Somers, Mary Margaret Woodward, Judy Blassingame.

The professional opportunities for which MATHEMATICS majors are prepared include secondary school and college teaching, civil service, statistical, industrial and business employment. A mathematics major acquires a critical, logical attitude for correct reasoning, a clear understanding of the method of drawing conclusions based on incomplete information as well as the deductive method. Mathematics as a creative endeavor has aesthetic values in addition to its usefulness as a tool in sciences and industries.

Kay Carroll, Karen Widdowson, Ann Lavender

The courses in RELIGION have as their objectives exploration, understanding and enrichment on the part of students regarding mankind's moral and religious heritage.

Doris Manning, Kate Foster, Ann Carroll, Anne Holderfield, Margaret McCready, Hilary Yeargin.

The objective of a study of PSYCHOLOGY is to understand the abilities, motives, thoughts and actions of people. Understanding of self and of others is a primary goal. The study is designed to help a person in all areas of life, especially as a Christian, as a homemaker, and as a member of a civic and social group.

Pauline Mao, Leah Tamplin, Mary Young, Bu Young Chung, Carol Clay.

CREATIVE HOMEMAKING AND FAMILY LIVING is designed for the primary purpose of preparing students for the role of wife, mother, homemaker, and woman-in-the-community. Considerable attention is also given to providing the student with a well-rounded general and cultural education and to providing her with the aptitudes and values of Christian family living in a democratic society.

Janice McCord, Nina Collins

The courses in BIOLOGY are designed to give a student an understanding of man's place in the living world and his dependence upon living organisms, and to provide the background for those who wish to acquire a degree of competence in the field of Biology.

Mary Alice Moore, Patricia Shriver, Betsy Palmer

The study of the courses in CHEMISTRY as arranged in this program will afford an orderly advancement in the knowledge of the nature of matter. Emphasis is placed upon accuracy of observation, of measurement, and of statement which together with the knowledge of scientific facts makes the study of chemistry a valuable part of a liberal education.

Neva King

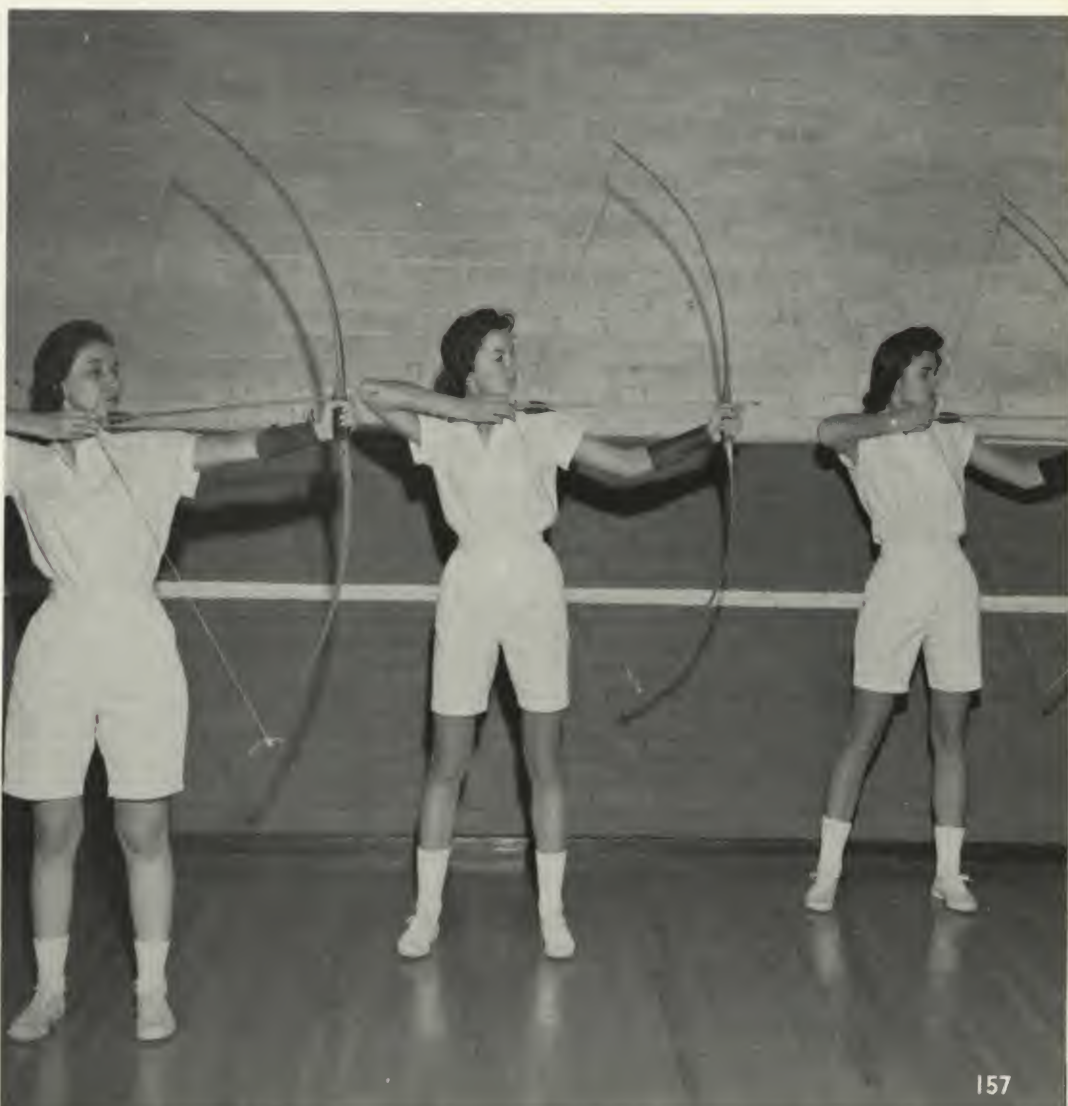

The Wesleyan student who has chosen MEDICAL TECHNOLOGY as her major must register as a senior in absentia and as a student in a School of Medical Technology. She will receive her B.S. degree.

The NURSING program includes both general and specialized education with supervised nursing experience in local hospitals and health centers. The graduate nurse with a B.S. degree will be qualified for the practice of clinical nursing, able to assume responsibilities as a hospital head nurse, as assistant clinical instructor in schools of nursing, as field teachers in public health nursing in addition to many others.

The PREMEDICAL SCIENCE program prepares students in the basic requirements in the science established by the professional schools of medicine, dentistry and allied fields.

The DEPARTMENT OF PHYSICAL EDUCATION aims to help each student to build up sufficient strength and vitality to meet the demands of a normally active life; to appreciate and practice fundamental health habits; to develop a normal carriage, a sense of rhythm, coordination and motor judgment; to be a cooperative and contributing participant in group activity; and to acquire skill and a lasting interest in wholesome forms of recreation.

Andy Zunzer, Dale Odum, Julie Singletary

The purpose of a HISTORY major is to introduce the student to the experiences and cultures of mankind from primitive life to present time. These courses form a background for and understanding of the History of Art, the History of Literature and Drama, Philosophy, Religion, Education and the Social Sciences. Courses in government acquaint the student with his civic responsibility.

Mary Ann Pollard, Eleanor Laslie, Jane Motsinger, Virginia Summerford, Tena Roberts, Jackie Davis, Martha Bell, Peggy Pearce, Sue Shepherd.

A major in ENGLISH equips the graduate to enter a variety of fields: education, journalism, business, religion, speech and philosophy. English gives the student an awareness of social, political, religious, and philosophical forces which have shaped the world in which we live.

A major in UNITED STATES LANGUAGE AND LITERATURE equips the student for work in the fields of journalism, teaching, and creative writing, as well as in other fields which require a comprehensive knowledge of trends in American literary thought and in the artistic and intellectual development of the United States.

The program in AMERICAN STUDIES is based on the proposition that a sound knowledge of our civilization, in its relations both to its own regions and to its neighbors throughout the world, contributes to human understanding and to the eventual achievement of world peace.

Kathy Rogers, Peggy Welborn, Richie Stiles, Hazel Jenne, Barbara Bird, Robin Price, Evelyn Davidson.

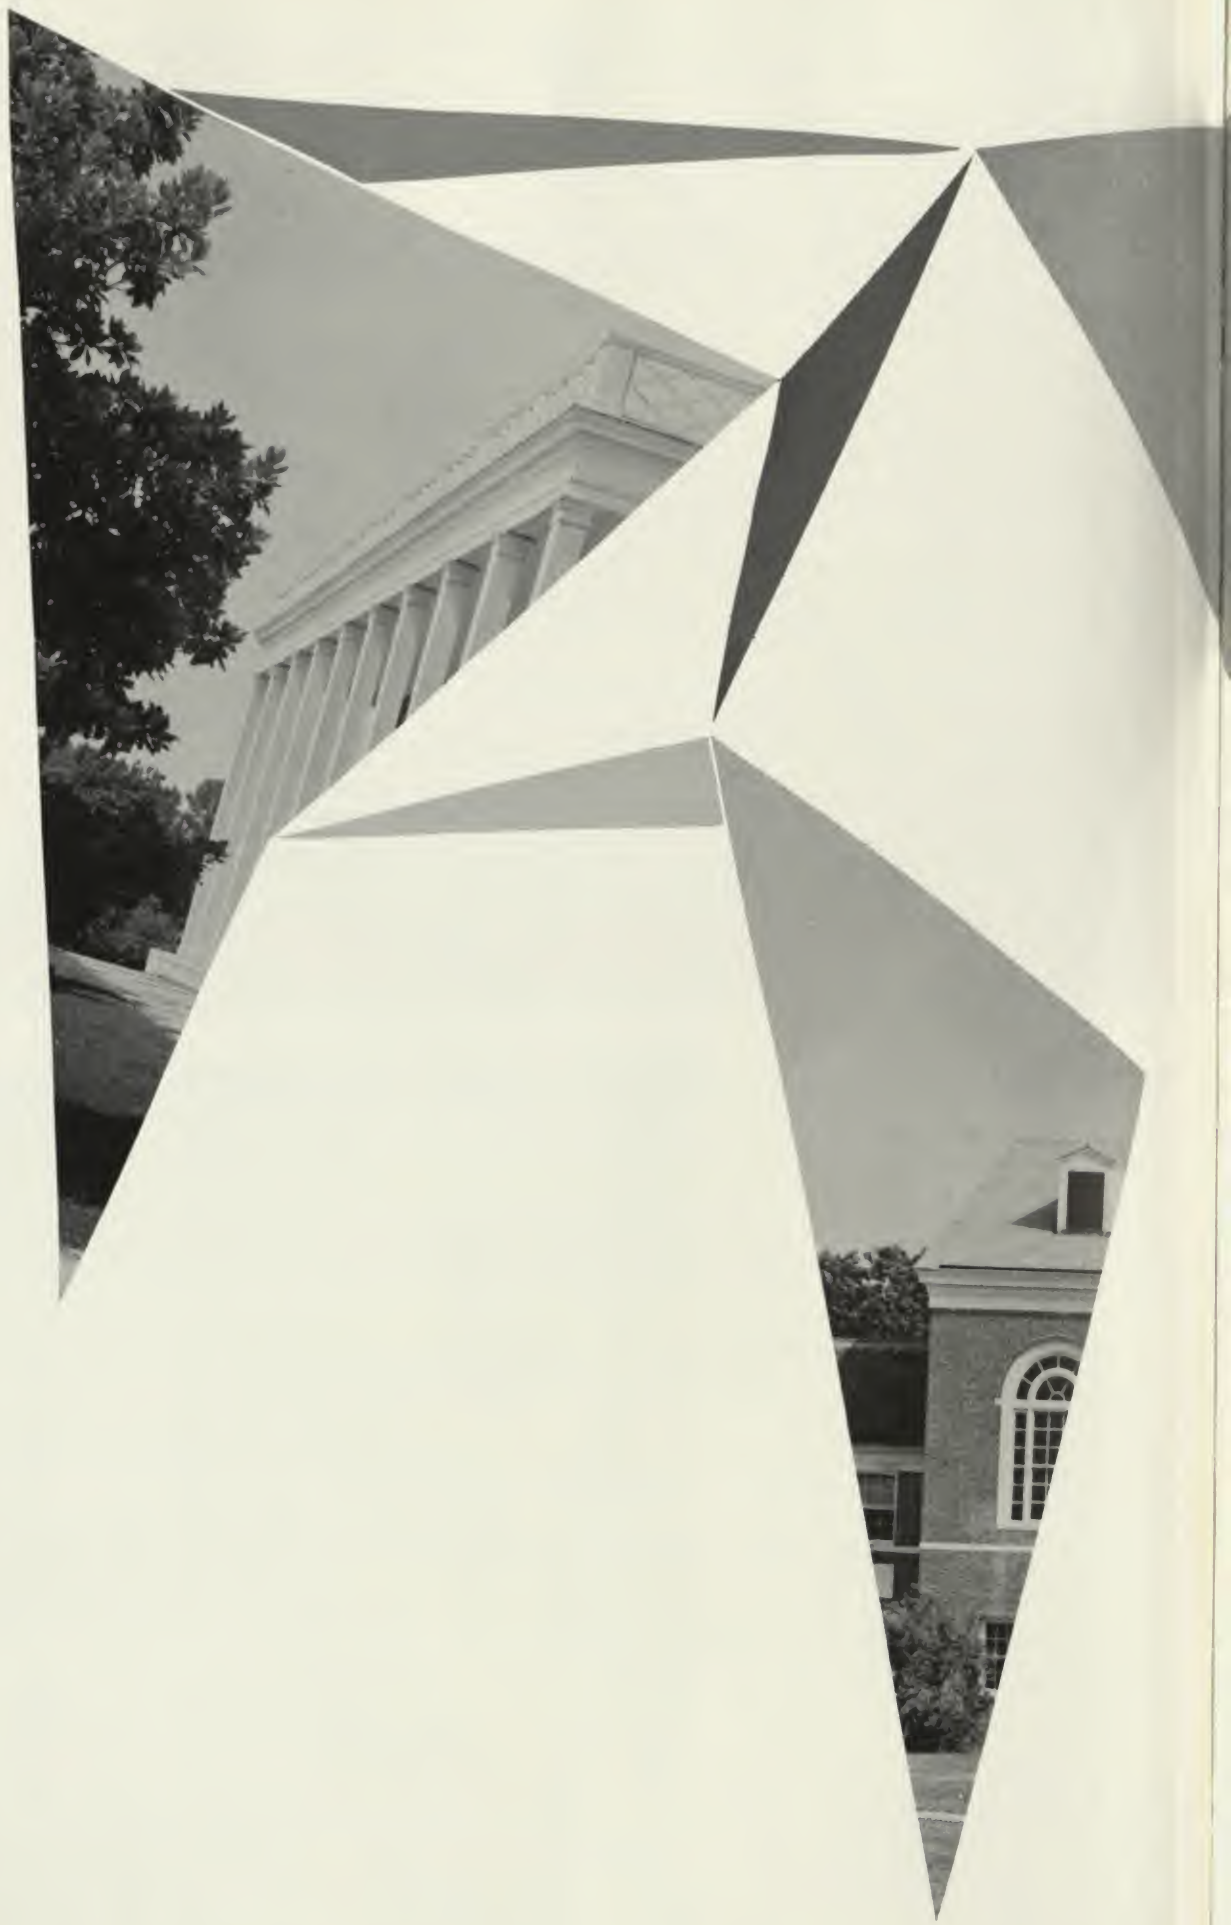

ART courses are designed with a two-fold objective: to give the general student an insight into the values of historic and contemporary art and opportunities for exploration in studio art; and to provide fundamental technical training in her chosen field with further study in the history, philosophy and theory of art, thereby developing the student's understanding and capacity for creative sensitivity.

Anne Harp, Gloria Price, Rachel Ann Wheeler.

A major in SPEECH affords a student training in diction, production, acting, and speech as well as exposure to the literature of yesterday and today. This training, aside from providing the fun of campus dramatics, prepares a person for a career in speech education, radio, television or the legitimate theater.

Paul Daum, Lydia Jordon, Victoria Wilson, Leora Mauldin, Paula Weatherly.

Organizations

College Government Association

The College Government Association of Wesleyan is based on the Honor System. This system places upon each Wesleyan a dual responsibility. First, she is responsible for seeing that she conducts herself in accordance with the principles set forth in the Honor System; second, she is responsible for seeing that her fellow students do likewise. The college believes that the students are capable of handling the serious responsibility of self-government; therefore, the students are the governing system and are ultimately responsible for its success.

The student body elects twelve students to the executive board of the College Government Association. This board strives to create a close relationship between the ideals of the Honor System and every phase of campus life. The ideals of the system become a reality as a result of working together to achieve the common goal of helping each Wesleyanne develop into responsible young women with mature judgment.

The Wesleyan Y.W.C.A. attempts to determine the needs of the students as individuals and as part of the college community so that it may provide a framework in which a student may evaluate her religious outlook and reorient it for her life. Included within this framework is a variety of activities ranging from corporate worship services to small group discussions. Throughout the year "Y" sponsors such activities as Stunt, Christian Emphasis Week, and Scholarship funds, but these activities are only means to the end, as stated in our purpose:

We unite in the desire to realize full and creative life through a growing knowledge of God.

We determine to have a part in making this life possible for all people.

In this task we seek to understand Jesus and to follow Him.

Social Standards

Those who represent Social Standards play an active and influential part in the planning and co-ordinating of the social activities on Wesleyan's campus.

The first undertaking of the year was Charm Week. A charm booklet called "Winsome Wesleyannes" gave the freshmen helpful hints.

"Mad Plaid," the theme of the Homecoming Dance, put everyone in a gay and festive mood.

The Spring Dance in April climaxed a successful year of social functions. Southern belles, dances on the green, and spring flowers created a lovely illusion.

These were only the larger functions on the social calendar. With the many informal dances and activities, as hayrides and fashion shows, Social Standards exerts a pleasant influence on every Wesleyanne.

Sigma Alpha Iota, National Honorary Music Fraternity for Women, was founded at the University of Michigan on June 12, 1903, and the local chapter was established in April, 1959. It is the largest and oldest professional music fraternity in the world and its members are elected on the basis of scholarship, musicianship, and by faculty recommendation. Naiads

The Naiads are a group of girls interested in water ballet and precision swimming. Try-outs are held each fall and the entrants are judged by the old members.

The talents of the Naiads are well displayed in the annual December aquacade; this year's theme was "Home for the Holidays." Other functions of the club are the Easter Vespers Show and the swimming meet.

The club is based on interest, participation, and teamwork—with the reward of a successful performance and a satisfied audience—from the television program to the show for the children's home. The hard work that a show requires and the fun of the party afterward gives the Naiads a spirit of togetherness . . . as the darkness of the pool was lit by the formation of a candle-lit Christmas tree.
